"I started looking for a challenging job with good money. I liked the idea of driving a bus because it was something different for a woman. Although the job carries a lot of responsibility, it's basically straight forward. There's a lot to be said for being a bus driver, you exercise judgement and make decisions all the time."

Vince's career on the buses began when he was 20 years of age. Completing his preliminary training with London Transport in Barbados, he began his career on the buses at Norbiton in 1962. He trained as a Bus Driver 45 years ago and later worked at Addlestone and Leatherhead for London and Country. He moved to Fulwell Bus Garage in the late 1990's and became a Controller in 2003.

"I am so pleased I made the decision to become a Bus Driver. I've always liked driving and that was one of the attractions, even though I was frightened at first at the size of the vehicles. But I got over that after about a month. If they're [people] really interested in knowing more about the job, they should look into it positively and not be discouraged."
